We had a successful year with up-to-date studies in the field of radiology in the first anniversary of the “Journal of Radiology in Medicine”. Radiology is one of the most dynamic and rapidly developing branches of modern medicine. This branch of science, which plays a vital role in making a diagnosis and guiding the treatment processes, is also constantly enriched with academic and practical information.

Our journal includes original research articles, meta-analyses, technical reports and studies on innovative imaging techniques. The published articles appeal not only to academics but also to all health professionals interested in radiology. At the same time, they will inspire students and researchers for new studies.

Journal of Radiology in Medicine aims to be a bridge that brings together scientists and health professionals, playing an important role in the development of radiology informatics. Sharing developing medical technologies and new treatment methods will be one of the important publications that bring scientific cooperation to the scientific world.

Best regards,
